Great things beckon again despite defeat

THE Blues News was launched almost a year ago, featuring a picture of Terry Evans tackling Chris Sutton, during our 2-0 defeat against Norwich City in the FA Cup third round.

This year we again lost 2-0 in the Third Round, but this time to West Ham United. Hopefully, it will not be long before we make the fourth round for the first time.

Considering we were in Division Three when The Blues News was launched, who could have envisaged the tremendous achievements by Martin O'Neill and the players who are pressing for promotion yet again, but this time in Division Two. Many, at the start of the season, would have settled for avoiding the five relegation places, and be delighted with a mid-table finish. It is only thanks to 'the lads' we can now even dream of a possible play-off spot.

One of the hardest jobs at Adams Park is guessing how many matchday programmes to order for each match. I'll never forget my first Bob Lord Trophy match against Yeovil Town when we ordered about 1,500 programmes and ended up with 869 unsold.

During our recent league match against Brighton and Hove Albion, for which we ordered 3,600 programmes, we had nearly 400 programmes at £1.20 each left over, despite a crowd of 7,085.

We normally sell one programme per two persons. Last year, we ordered 5,000 programmes for Norwich City and had hundreds left over. Despite this we decided to play safe against West Ham United and had 5,500 printed.

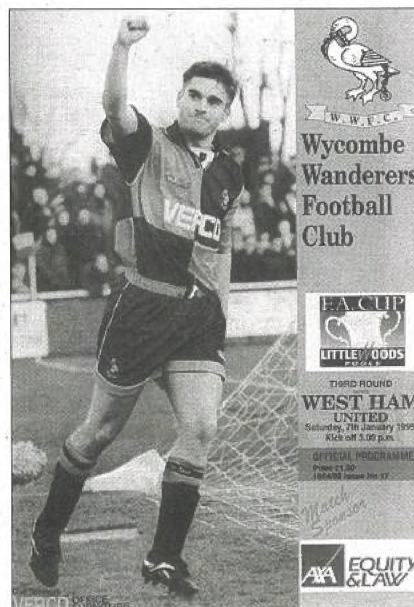

We sold out to a record crowd of 9,007 by 2.30pm at £1.50 each. Subsequently, we have ordered 78 more for anybody desperately still wanting a programme. Simply call in tomorrow to the Hazlemere Windows Programme Shop at the far end of Adams Park.

It is our special members day tomorrow, which only members' and season ticket holders will benefit from. As long as you join one of our membership schemes before you enter the Stadium tomorrow you will receive £20 worth of Wanderers in Town vouchers from the turnstile operators. The day is the club's way of showing our appreciation to our members by giving something back to those who are committed to supporting the club.

Members can get 30p discount on tomorrow's matchday programme from in front of the Commercial Office, by producing their membership card or season ticket.

You may remember a previous article that stated we wanted to compensate Junior Terrace Season Ticket Holders for the two Quid-a-Kid days this season. The club has decided to give an additional £5 discount to all Junior Terrace Season Ticket Holders on renewal next season, which more than covers the theoretical £4.60 apparent loss of value this season. We are also in the process of creating a Family Terrace in the Davenport Vernon Vauxhall Stand, which will be no smoking section, enabling children to have a clearer view.

In demand: Extra copies of the programme for the West Ham game are available from the clubshop

Back on track: Gary Patterson scores his first goal for Wycombe in a 2-2 draw at Cambridge a week after being sent off on his debut

We defy the odds with grit and spirit

CAPTAIN'S LOG
by Terry Evans

LOOKING back on 1994, I thought our best League result was going to be the one against Blackpool, yet just a week later we beat Huddersfield.

I felt Gary Patterson was very unlucky to be dismissed. His second challenge was more clumsy than malicious, but the opposing player seemed to make a meal of it which convinced the referee that Gary should walk.

We have, however, shown before that, when our position looks grave, the team has the ability and self-belief to ignore the odds and dig in. It was clear that the big crowd still felt we were in with a shout, especially when we drew level. When Garns scored our second goal, the noise was magnificent. There was then no way we were going to let the game slip.

On the following Friday night Gary bounced back with a goal to bring us level after Cambridge had scored early on against the run of play. From being one down to going one up, I was very disappointed not to win this game against a side who were not doing too well at the time.

But as I have said before, every team in this division keeps getting results against each other. It was then no surprise when Cambridge picked up points from both Birmingham and Hull which made our draw easier for me to live with.

It was decided that the following Wednesday was to be the day for the lads' Christmas drink, as our next game was not until five days later. We trained in the morning at Holmer Green. Don Want opened up the bar for us in the afternoon and Caroline put on a lovely buffet. At around 5.30pm Mark Austin kindly ferried us to the Chequers pub in the club mini-bus.

The Chequers, in Old Amer-sham, is owned by Keith Ryan's parents Jim and Jan, who also laid on a first-class buffet. Many of us are frequent visitors. They welcome the lads with open arms and have always been very hospitable, be it for a drink, breakfast or in some cases, even a bed for the night.

The Chequers is also where we give out our Christmas presents to each other. Some weeks previously all our names were put into a hat and the person you pull out is who you have to buy a gift for, rather than having to get everybody something.

It is only meant to be for a bit of fun, yet when John Robertson received a complete outfit from Oxfam, he was so pleased he immediately put it on, to date he is still wearing it.

At about 9pm, Mark took us to a nightclub in Watford. I remember waking up the next day at around 1pm in my own bed with my head pounding. Perhaps I felt fragile because I had eaten something that did not quite agree with me!

TERRY EVANS

Brighton on Boxing day was a dismal draw. After having a player sent off, they set themselves up to defend very similar to the Bournemouth game a week later.

Because of our League position, most teams now come to Adams Park prepared to defend deep in numbers which means we have to be patient and professional in our approach. If we try too hard to force the game, we can be caught on the break. Should they score like Hull and Bournemouth did, they are then even harder to break down with every player behind the ball. But, as was proved with Huddersfield, if we keep our shape and are determined we can overcome these tactics.

We were all of course very grateful that Dave Carroll managed to save our blushes with a very late strike against Bournemouth when defeat loomed.

Winning the toss at Oxford was an important boost for us, making them attack their own end in the first half clearly unsettled them. They had a lot of possession but as teams had done to us, we defended well. We were very fired up and I firmly believed that there was no way we were going to concede a goal.

We lost both Cyrille and Garns towards the end which made it difficult to hold the ball up. Each time we cleared it seemed to come straight back, yet even with this immense pressure, we still prevented them from having very few clear-cut chances during the entire game.

Our large support made a great deal of noise throughout which silenced the Oxford faithful - something I have mentioned before that really makes a difference to the lads.

We were all given a couple of days off following our win. I chose to spend the majority of my time in bed as two games in consecutive days do take their toll. I was not too disappointed that the Chester game was called off, many of the lads had received knocks, including myself, and would possibly have either been struggling for the FA Cup tie or would not have made it at all. On the down side it did allow a few teams to make up ground on us.

We were all looking forward to the visit of West Ham. Like Norwich last season, if we had played when the draw was made I feel we would now be in the next round as they were going through a very bad patch. After a convincing win at Forest, together with an excellent performance away at Blackburn, they clearly were on a high.

However, our first half performance was more than just credible. We worked hard and did not feel out of place. A goal soon after the break settled West Ham down and gave them more confidence. They started to hold the ball for long periods without putting too much pressure on our goal.

We were, of course, then chasing the game and were caught on a break pushing forward which we had to do. It is always very disappointing to lose any game but a fixture against a Premiership side may only happen once a season so it stays in the memory for a long time.

I was very proud of the lads. We did not let ourselves down and were not overrun by a side ranked two divisions above us.

Both Match of the Day and Sky gave us little credit but I suppose had we won, Wycombe would have been the main game shown, with accolades raining in from every direction - but that's football.

Big C is loved by all

THE man they call 'Big C' will be treated to the night of his life on April 30 - thanks to his four former Midlands clubs, West Bromwich Albion, Coventry, Aston Villa and Wolverhampton Wanderers, together with the Birmingham Sports Argus/Evening Mail. Cyrille Regis will be honoured in a glittering tribute dinner at the NEC in an event sponsored by Apollo 2000, which will raise money to help the development of young players at his old clubs. Here STEVE TUDGAY of the Sports Argus, reflects on the playing career of an honorary Midlander.

GENTLE giant. Mr Nice Guy. Living Legend. Those are just some of the words used to describe Cyrille Regis by the men who forged his memorable career in the Midlands.

From the moment a raw 19-year-old Regis burst onto the scene for Albion in a League Cup tie against Rotherham in September 1977, the mere mention of his name has been known to cause outbreaks of goosebumps.

"It speaks volumes for the kind of man Cyrille is that he wants to put something back into the game", says organiser Mike McGinnity, a former Albion director and current Coventry City deputy chairman.

French Guyana-born Regis began his love affair with the Midlands by joining Albion for £5,000 from non-League Hayes in 1977, scoring 188 goals in 635 games for his four clubs. He played 297 games, scoring 112 goals for Albion, 62 goals in 274 at Coventry where he also won an FA Cup winners' medal.

Tribute: Regis

Regis teamed up again with ex-West Brom boss Ron Atkinson in Aston Villa's League Championship runners-up season, playing 54 times in all and scoring nine goals before scoring twice in ten games for Wolves.

The magical thing is that the respect and deep affection extends not only from the terraces, but also from the managers who spotted and signed him - Ronnie Allen, Bobby Gould, Atkinson and Graham Turner.

Regis, the only man in history to play for four top Midlands clubs - Albion, Coventry, Villa and Wolves - will go down as one of the all-time greats.

And it is Turner who pays the 36-year-old centre forward the supreme compliment when he reveals the acclaim he received from Wolves supporters during his year-long stay at Molineux between 1993-94.

"Wolves fans have a lot of trouble accepting players who made themselves famous at Albion, as Cyrille did," he said. "But the support he got from his very first game with us was incredible."

"I'll never forget the night. We were playing a pre-season friendly at Wrexham and Cyrille came on as a late substitute.

"Our fans didn't have to wait to see what he was like. They knew what Cyrille could do and they loved him. That shows the standing of the man throughout the game."

Who would have dreamt such an outcome when Allen, then chief scout to Johnny Giles at Albion, travelled to the outskirts of north London to watch an unknown quantity play for Hayes in the late winter of 1977.

This is where it all started - and Allen will never forget what he saw. "I had kept in touch with an old pal of mine from the RAF. We had done National Service together but he was working for Hayes and was desperate to raise some money for the club," recalls Allen.

"I asked him what players he'd got and he told me to come and look for myself. It was a bitterly cold night I remember, the pitch was frosty and I wasn't too optimistic."

"But there was a corner after a few minutes and a big, black centre forward stood in the goalmouth surrounded by four defenders.

Wanted

"He didn't have anyone else from his own side for support, but the ball still ended up in the net - together with the four defenders.

"That was enough for me. I wanted him and asked Hayes how much they wanted. They said £5,000 which seemed fair so I put it to the Board of Directors. "They thought it was too much, but agreed in the end and they didn't have cause to regret a single penny."

Regis signed for Albion in May 1977 and Allen took over as manager from Giles just a few weeks later.

He describes Regis's debut against Rotherham on August 31, 1977, in a 4-0 win and his League debut four days later against Middlesbrough - both at The Hawthorns - as "unbelievable".

"He scored two of the greatest goals I have ever seen in my life," he added. "I played him against Rotherham in an early League Cup round and he had the fans eating out of his hand. They were even shouting for the teenage lad, who was making his debut, to take a penalty we were awarded."

"He took it, scored and never looked back. After that Cyrille was the first name on the teamsheet. He really was a gentle giant."

Living legend: Although gone, Cyrille Regis will never be forgotten by his former Midlands clubs

Regis had been constantly linked with big-money transfers from the early days in 1977, through to the time he eventually left in a shock £250,000 transfer to Coventry in 1984.

He had become restless at The Hawthorns. The glory, glory days of Big Ron, The Three Degrees, and beating Manchester United 5-3 at Old Trafford, had given way to a subdued atmosphere under Giles second time around.

Gould sensed his moment. "I had been told by the Coventry board that there was no money to spend," he recalls. "But suddenly I was given a few bob. I needed a strong front man and I thought of Cyrille."

"A lot of people had been put off by his wages at Albion, but I took the bull by the horns and went for it."

"I wasn't to know he was going to become a living legend at Coventry after such a wonderful career at Albion, but that's what happened. I also signed Dave Bennett from Cardiff around that time and those two are still big mates today."

"But John Sillett deserves a lot of credit for the way he handled and developed Cyrille as a centre forward with outstanding technical ability."

"The closest player to him in the modern game is Les Ferdinand.

He's rated at about £4 million, which is what Cyrille in his prime would cost today - and more."

"The highest compliment I can pay him is that he is still playing at the age of 36 for Wycombe Wanderers and still earning the respect of the supporters and his team mates."

"There has always been an aura about Cyrille. Don't get me wrong, he hasn't been a saint. He had problems which should never be forgotten."

"But when he had those problems, he faced up to them, found Christianity and straightened himself out."

Fans are given raw deal with European Championship tickets

HAS anyone managed to secure any tickets for the 1996 European Cup Finals? I tried to wade through the form filling a few weeks ago and realised after a short time that I wouldn't be seeing the final in Summer 1996.

As you will have read in the paper, for a remote chance of seeing the final, the minimum you need to spend is more than £250. However, that was not taking into account that all the cheap seats at Wembley sold out weeks or even months ago and the minimum to see the final could be in the £300-£400 region! Thus unless you are a) loaded b) are the managing director of an enormous international conglomerate or c) have a close relative selected for the 1996 England Squad, then rest assured you will be settling down in front of the television.

That is of course if Sky Sports' don't beat the BBC in another football-screening duel and prevent the Beeb from dreaming up another unforgettable new footballing theme tune.

When I attempted to inquire about Euro '96 tickets to an assistant at Midland Bank - one of the banks responsible for administering the Euro '96 tickets - he admitted to not having a clue about how the ticket system worked. He then handed me a phone, connected directly to the Euro '96 hotline, where I spoke to another assistant who again, seemed to have little knowledge about how I could secure a final ticket.

He did mention that many of the commercial boxes at Wembley were sold over two years ago! So once again the true football fan, unless buying nearly a dozen tickets, will have little chance of seeing much.

Why can't some kind of voucher system be operated through League, and perhaps GM Vauxhall club programmes? The fans could then make applications for tickets using their vouchers as proof of actually turning out to see a game once in a while, if not every week, and thus enable the real football fans to see the games.

Anyway, that's my little whinge for the week now to end my rantings on a good note. I am sure everyone in Wycombe breathed a sigh of relief when Martin announced his plans to stay with the club. This is the second time he has rejected a much larger club to stay at Adams Park and I can't help but express my respect for his decision to do so. When Nottingham Forest approached him at the end of the 1992/3 season he also turned them down.

When asked for his reasons for staying with Wycombe, Martin said in a television interview that his crazy dream isn't so crazy now, as theoretically we could be playing in the First Division in nine months!! (just theory of course).
